Casualty Co Settles Damage Suit Involving Former Sheriff Washburn

LOSES APPEAL

Litigation Results from Washburn Auto Killing Man

The $10 000 damage suit brought against the Maryland Casualty Co and Frank Washburn former Marion county sheriff by L A Gordon administrator of the estate of Raymond Reynolds was settled by attorneys for the litigants yesterday

Under the terms of the settlement the Casualty company will pay the Reynolds estate $4 500

The settlement was made after the state supreme court refused to allow attorneys for the Casualty company to appeal a decision of the third district court of appeals The court of appeals had previously reversed the Marion county court of common pleas

Five Years in Court

The case was tried in the court here about five years ago after Washburn then sheriff fatally injured Reynolds in a traffic mishap Gordon as administrator brought suit jointly against Washburn and his bonding company

Charles L Justice then judge of the county court ruled that the bonding company was not liable for damage under the sheriff's bond since the sheriff was not on official business at the time of the accident Testimony showed that Washburn was returning county prisoners to the jail here from his farm where they had been working

Justice directed the jury to return a verdict in favor of the bonding company thus throwing all liability for damages on the sheriff The jury returned a verdict of $3 000 against the sheriff

Appeal Made

The case was appealed by the law firm of Carhart & Warner attorneys for Gordon to the district court of appeals The attorneys contended that the bonding company was liable under the sheriff's bond

This contention was upheld when the appellate court reversed the lower court In refusing the Casualty company an appeal the state supreme court in effect upheld the decision of the district court

The bonding company was represented in the litigation by the law firm of Mouser Young Mouser & Wiant

WONDER if women always know what they're doing? Recently in one of Marion's beauty shops that caters to many of the well-to-do women of the city, a daughter of one of the social leaders was having her hair bobbed

When the hair was set, the girl was seated under a dryer These dryers are constructed so that the person under one can't hear a sound below a screech. This young woman was evidently composing a song and thought that she was humming very softly to herself

In the beauty parlor patrons were having the time of their lives, watching her keeping time and singing at the top of her voice!

Digging into Past

JONAS Conklin well known Marion resident who has lived here through the many years that carried the community from the status of a village to its present city proportions was carried back to memories of his childhood while viewing excavation operations at the Pennes building site on West Center st last week

The ground on which the new mercantile structure is to go up was the site of the old Conklin home many years ago Near the home was a well which came very close to bringing Jonas Conklin's career to an untimely end when he was a child. He took an accidental plunge into the well while at play and only the fact that help was near at hand to effect a prompt rescue saved him

While standing in the throng of onlookers viewing excavation work one day last week Mr Conklin saw the old well unearthed by the steam shovel used in digging the store basement With this one exception it was a case of digging far into the past a matter of somewhere in the neighborhood of four score years.

Market Changes

VEAL liver at 70 cents a pound The market price quoted in Marion Monday may have no particular interest to the younger generation but with older folk it is decidedly significant of marked changes which have taken place in the value of liver as a food article

They do not have to be very old to recall that there was a time when liver whether veal or other classes not so choice was virtually worthless from a market standpoint It was available at all meat shops for the asking and the dealers were glad to get it off their hands

The amazing increase in the price of veal liver is due mainly to the discovery that this meat is of value as a diet for anemic patients dealers say

Second Fatal Crash Occurs in Ohio's Mimic Warfare

Selfridge Field Pilot Nose-Dives 150 Feet Near Yellow Springs

Lieut. Florin W. Shade, "Crack" Flier of Red Army, Meets Instant Death; Unable To Get His Plane High into Air, Never Rising Over 200 Feet

DAYTON, May 21—The second fatal airplane crash in the 11-day mock war now being staged in Ohio by the United States army went on record here today.

Lieut. Florin W. Shade, "crack" Selfridge, Mich., field flier, was killed near Yellow Springs, yesterday when the motor of his small pursuit plane wheezed and died, and the craft nosedived into the ground from a height of about 150 feet.

Shade, whose home was in Hays, Kansas, met instant death. His head was badly crushed.

A farmer, P. A. Donley, near whose home the plane fell, witnessed the accident.

Goes Into Plowed Field

The aviator was flying at about 150 feet, Donley said, when, his motor missed and then stopped. The plane crashed in a plowed field, burying itself into the soft ground, the farmer declared.

Lieutenant Shade was a member of the flying force of the Red army, which is defending eastern Ohio from the attacks of the Blue western Ohio army. His home airport during the "war" was at Norton Field, Columbus.

He was attached to the first pursuit group of the Red forces and during a truce in the simulated war yesterday Major Royce, his flight commander, decided to pay the enemy a friendly call and visit Fairfield depot here, headquarters of the Blue army. He was accompanied by Lieutenant Shade and six other pilots. The Kansas birdman experienced difficulty in his hop off from Norton field and was well behind the other fliers when they landed at the field here.

The plane also "panted and coughed" when he started for his home field, and after a few adjustments, he continued to be hurled to his death a few minutes later.

Up Only 200 Feet

The crippled engine did not raise the plane more than 200 feet above the ground from the time he took off until the time he crashed.

Second Lieut Edward L. Meadow of Rockwell field, near San Diego, Calif., was killed Saturday when his plane crashed in midair over North Columbus with the ship of Second Lieut. Andrew F. ("Fred") Soltter, also of the Pacific coast field. Solter escaped by a parachute jump.

At The Same Time Gain in Physical Vigor and Youthfulness and Swiftly Possess a Clear Skin and Vivacious Eyes That Sparkle With Glorious Health.

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses.

Every morning take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast.

Total of School Visitors at High Mark in April

Parents and other visitors to Marion public schools gave a big boost to the monthly report from the office of George A. Bowman, superintendent of schools, for April. The usual record is around 300 visits to the schools in a month. In April of this year there were 1,661 visits. This large total is due to the hearty corporation of the people of Marion in attending the annual art exhibition of the first six grades of the schools, sponsored by Miss Edith Keeler, supervisor of art.

A. H. Crane's room at Vernon Heights reports an attendance of 98.5 per cent and no cases of tardiness for the month and Miss Florabel Clark's room at Greenwood Street school reports 98.4 per cent and no cases of tardiness.

Tardiness Record

There were 170 cases of tardiness reported, one less than in March and 12 less than April in 1928. State, Oliney and Davids Street schools reported only one case of tardiness each, with 35 at Silver Street and 45 at Harding High school.

The attendance figures for the month are excellent, with a fall of but 15 from March. There was a gain of 154 in perfect attendance over April of last year. Sixteen schools are listed, and only three have under a hundred perfect in attendance for the month. Davids Street had 74, North Main street, 75 and Lincoln, 75.

Lincoln Avenue school reported 85.2 per cent attendance, the only school under 90 per cent for the month. Vernon Heights schools headed the list with 96.8 per cent. The total for the month was 94 per cent, the same as last month, five-tenths per cent above last year.

Only four schools reported cases of teachers tardy, making a low record of five for the month. Harding High school reported two cases of tardiness. Last month the total cases of teacher tardiness was nine, and in April of 1928, the total was nine.

Glenwood Leads

The high mark of the number of home visits was set by Glenwood school. Teachers at the building made 79 home visits during the month. The low mark was four, at North Main Street building. The total this month was 416 home visits, 112 more than March and 88 less than the same month a year ago.

The following teachers report having made 10 or more home visits for the month of April, 1929:

Mildred Houtz, Glenwood, 20; Mildred Wettenauer, Glenwood, 17; Ruth Gallimore, Oak, 15; Elizabeth Dairy, Lincoln, 14; Adelene Arthur, Lincoln, 13; Carrie Durr, Davids, 13; Katherine Hecker, Davids, 12; Donna Wilson, Glenwood, 12; Gladys Probst, Mark, Mary Curl, Mark, Elizabeth Dowel, Davids, Rhea King, Oliney, Geneva Terry, Oak and Bertha Orians, Davids, all 11 visits; Elizabeth Crissinger, Glenwood, Edna Finley, Oak, Gladys Larson, Oak, Florence McColly, Glenwood and Charlotte Willoughby, Silver, all 10 visits.

155-CAR TRAIN RUN ON HOCKING VALLEY

One of Largest Coal Shipments on Record Here Used To Test New Engine

What is reported as one of the largest coal trains ever to pass through this city went north yesterday morning on the Hocking Valley tracks with a total of 155 loaded coal cars. The purpose for such a large shipment was to test the new Erie freight engine that Hocking Valley officials are trying out preparatory to purchasing several new engines.

This engine made its initial trip on the Hocking Valley lines about two weeks ago, the first test being mainly to judge its adaptability to the Hocking Valley track and its speed with an empty train behind it.

The test yesterday was to see how much pull the engine had when hauling a loaded coal train. When it passed through Marion it was making fairly good speed, considering the large pull.

Hocking Valley officials here are of the opinion that this was the largest coal train to go north on the Hocking in recent years.

SAY WOMAN INSANE

Canton Mother Who Killed Priest Acquitted on Mental Grounds

CANTON, May 21 — Mrs. Maria Guerrieri, mother of five children and the confessed slayer of Rev. Father Joseph Riccardi, pastor of St. Anthony's Catholic Church here, was acquitted of first degree murder on the sole grounds of insanity.

The verdict was returned by a jury of six men and six women after three and a half hours deliberation. Although acquitted of the murder charge, the status of the woman was uncertain. Police had not decided whether to file an insanity affidavit against her. She was ordered held.

The shooting of Rev. Riccardi followed the morning mass in St. Anthony's church last May 10. Mrs. Guerrieri confessed at once. Insanity was her defense during the trial.

SUFFERING OF 5 YEARS ENDED BY MODERN KONJOLA

Man Says New Medicine Went To the Source of Liver and Bladder Trouble.

MR. A. C. DRUGGAN

"I want to praise and recommend Konjola because it completely ended my health troubles," said Mr. A. C. Druggan, 122 West Rich Street, Columbus.

"My entire system was run-down, due to a torpid liver. I was subject to dizzy spells, and it was necessary for me, at times to hold on to something to keep from falling. There seemed to be a constant swelling in my left side, and piercing pains effected me. Constipation added its burden.

"I gave Konjola a trial, and noticed improvement right away. By the time I had used four bottles, my health was better than it had been in five years. My liver functions properly, dizzy spells are gone, and work is no longer drudgery. The swelling and pain in my left side are gone, and I don't tire so easily. Konjola also regulated my bowels, and cleansed my system of the poisons and impurities. I look and feel like a different person."

Konjola is sold in Marion at Stump & Sams Pharmacy, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—Adv.

The senate will seek to force the house to vote on the debenture feature of the senate farm relief bill, a story from Washington tells us. In other words the senate is seeking to get the house to assist it in letting go of the debenture "bar's" tail.

Accused of selling liquor to two men whose car killed two boys and seriously injured two others, a Chicagoan is being held as accessory to murder. A few convictions along that line should put at least a modicum of respect for law into the rum-sellers.

Seven killed in week-end traffic accidents in Ohio. That's a marked improvement over the week-end preceding it, but still not what it should be, or would be, were motorists to exercise the care they should in driving. The highway accident record in the United States is a reproach to the intelligence of the people of the land.

Twenty-two persons injured when a Cleveland-Pittsburgh bus skids on a slippery roadway near Butler, Pennsylvania, rolls over twice and catches fire. Aren't these long-distance buses having more than their fair share of ill-luck, suffering out of all proportion to their ratio to the motor cars in use?

A Gallon man's car plunges into a creek about a quarter of a mile east of the bridge at which four young school teachers lost their lives a few weeks ago. Evidently the highways in the vicinity have hardly been made so safe as the state highway department would have had us believe, shortly after the latter accident.

"Rumored Lindy Is Threatened with Death," reads a headline over a North Haven, Maine, story telling of the placing of a heavy armed guard about the summer home of the Morrows. There will be little ground for wonder should the rumor prove correct. The private affairs of the colonel and his bride have been given enough newspaper publicity to attract the attention of every nut in the land.

A Bar to Justice.

There was much truth and a lot of sound sense in the short address by Dr. Raymond Moley, professor of public law at Columbia university, broadcasted over WEAF, one night last week, as all those who listened in on it know.

It is the doctor's view, and in us it seems one well taken, that the public is misled into accepting at face value the loud talking of police officials who rush into print, and that it is neither sympathetic to real expertness in criminal justice nor "disposed to retain and sustain in public office the officials who administer it."

"A few sensational cases capture public interest," said the doctor, "and to a great degree determine the popular conception of justice. The great gist of crimes that constitute ninety-nine per cent, of the work of the criminal courts pass without notice. Their solution, trial and punishment are a part of the day's work of the law enforcement officers. But the general problem of making the United States less lawless is bound up in what is done in these prosaic prosecutions, rather than in all the Loeb-Leopold, Hall-Mills and Snyder-Gray cases in a generation."

Doctor Moley lamented the fact that such is human nature that comparatively few public officials are able to resist the temptation to break into the rays of the publicity spotlight when opportunity offers; that few are able to combat the temptation to talk for publication regarding public business which intrigues the interest of the public.

"When a mountebank rises to the leadership of a police department or a great prosecuting office," said the doctor, "the interests of justice are certain to be sacrificed on the altar of publicity."

"The general prospect," said the doctor in conclusion, "is not satisfactory. Our fundamental problem is to devise means by which careful, conscientious public service by judges, prosecutors and police commissioners can be rewarded by a consistent, continued and intelligent public support."

In a word, it is the belief of this Columbia teacher of law that so much publicity is given the utterances of those who are perpetual seekers after publicity and so little, comparatively, to those officials who do not, that the public is misled into overestimating the worth of those who in sporting parlance would be referred to as the four-flushers and far too little to the officials of real merit. To put it another way, he holds that sensationalism is a bar erected against justice in its fight against crime.

Needed Funds Should Be Voted.

Announcement has come from the county commissioners' office that the voters of the county will be asked to approve at the coming election in November a two-mill levy for a term of five years for road purposes; to be exact, for the repair and maintenance of the county roads.

A two-mill levy on a county tax duplicate of $90,000,000, the somewhat greater portion of which is represented by the duplicate of the city of Marion, will mean an annual fund for road purposes of $180,000 for the next five years.

It has long been our belief, and we have been consistent champions of the proposition, that the worst possible way to burn up public money is to invest it in the construction of roads and then let them go to ruin, and that no funds can be better employed than those which are judiciously extended in the repair and maintenance of improved highways. Feeling thus, we would be the last to decry the proposal of a two-mill levy, if a levy of that size is necessary.

As the tax duplicate of a city grows, naturally the return from any fixed levy thereon increases. By way of illustration, something like $12,000,000 has been added to the tax duplicate of the city of Marion since the two-mill levy now in force was approved, thus increasing the returns from the two-mill levy on the city duplicate $24,000. In a county in which a large city is located, there is corresponding larger return from a levy than there would be in a county not possessing such a city. By way of illustration, a very small levy would produce a very large return in Cuyahoga county because of the enormous tax duplicate of Cleveland. Thus, when figuring on a levy, the increase in the size of the duplicate as well as increases from other sources should be considered. In other words, there is utterly no reason for making a two-mill levy simply because that was the levy made five or ten years ago.

On the other hand if the county commissioners need $180,000 in addition to the county's share of the gas tax and the license plate tax, the voters should approve a levy which will raise that amount, which at present would mean approval of the continuation of the present two-mill levy.

Some days since we stated in these columns that the county received $60,000 last year from the gas tax and approximately $10,000 from the license tax, a total of approximately $60,000, which we held should be increased this year owing to the increasing of the gas tax from three to four cents.

A few days later, a statement came from the county commissioners' office, made by a member of the board, that the return from both these sources last year was only $40,000, and the further statement was made that there were nearly 900 miles of county roads in the county exclusive of state and township roads. Naturally we made investigation at the county auditor's office and found our figures to be the correct ones, the license tax having brought the county approximately $10,000 and the gas tax five checks of $10,000 each from the state, and investigation at the county surveyor's office developed the fact that the total mileage of all the roads in the county is 790.22, of which only 435.60 miles are county roads; 342.22 miles being township roads; 101.03 miles being state roads and 11.28 miles being unimproved roads inside some of the smaller population centers of the county. These figures do not, of course, include the streets of Marion and other corporations, with the roads of which the commissioners have nothing to do.

We do not hold for a minute that the figures carried in the published announcement from the commissioners' office were the result of an intent to deceive. We took them to be rather due to a careless estimate by a member of the board. But the sum of approximately a quarter of a million dollars is a large one and statements bearing thereon should not be carelessly made, and we hope none such will be made by the board when they ask the voters of the county to authorize the two-mill levy.

It seems to us that, when the county commissioners ask for an annual sum of approximately $180,000 for a period of five years, they should at some time before the election take the public into their confidence and state the chief projects on which the money is to be expended and what future projects they have in mind in way of reconditioning the county highways. We believe the county engineer is able to give them the necessary data. If he is not, then we are at a loss to understand how they know that they need the sum they seek. If they thus show the people of Marion county that there is need for a levy of two mills, we haven't a doubt but what the voters will authorize the levy, for certainly all must realize by this time the vital economic need of repairing and maintaining roads.

Watch Baby Closely.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Babies are subject to many little ailments and other more serious ones. One of the latter is rickets.

This disease appears between the sixth and eighteenth months. It is unusual to see it in younger infants and it rarely comes later than the third year of life.

It is really remarkable the proportion of the baby population that has rickets. Students of the subject contend that more than half of them have the disease in one form or another.

This disease is founded on a failure in the nourishment of the child. Its effects are not confined to one part of the body, all of the tissues are involved. But, of course, it is the abnormal condition of the bones that is most important.

Everybody knows about the "soft spot" in the head. The bones of the skull do not harden and knit together until the brain is developed. That is nature's way to protect the thinking machinery.

This soft spot, normal in early life, gradually closes. By the time the eighteenth month is reached, the closure should be complete. But in rickets there may be delay in this process and the soft spot persists till the third or fourth year.

There are certain general symptoms. Among them are sweating of the head, paleness of the skin, weakness, restlessness and much crying.

Of course, the muscles are soft and flabby. They always are in general debility from any cause. But in rickets the weakness of the muscles may be so pronounced that the baby can't sit up and is very late in attempts at walking.

Because of the muscle weakness, the abdominal walls give away. In consequence there is "pot belly."

The poor little legs can not support themselves. There is "knock-knee." The child is too frail to stand. The bones are so soft they bend. Flat-foot is another effect of rickets.

"Pigeon breast" and "bending" of the ribs are other symptoms. Early decay of the baby teeth is another sign of the disease.

In seeking the cause for rickets we go at once to errors in feeding and to the lack of sunlight. Unless the food given a baby is rich in lime, phosphorus and the vitamins there is sure to be trouble.

In a curative way the most valuable food is cod liver oil. As a preventive of rickets, too, it is very important. Cod liver oil and sunlight or artificial lights that possess the ultra-violet rays, will cause all the symptoms to disappear. If the mother has good health and an abundance of milk it is well to continue the breast feeding as long as possible. It must not be forgotten, however, that a full supply of good milk is essential to the child's welfare. This is the child's chief source of the lime supply.

Bear in mind then that proper feeding, sunlight and cod liver oil are the essentials. Your doctors will prescribe the remedies needed.

Editorial Opinion.

THE HOOVER METHOD.

Members of congress and other observers in Washington are discussing the so-called Hoover method of transacting public business, including the handling of political affairs. The Hoover method, it seems, is simply the method employed by skilled business executives.

Mr. Hoover, the reports say, declines to trouble himself about details of administration and minor appointments. He determines policies, lays down broad principles, indicates objectives and explains purposes to be attained, but leaves everything else to heads of departments or of bureaus. If those heads are efficient, alert and experienced, they do not need to bother the president with minor questions arising in the administration of public affairs.

That the Hoover method is effective in business is certain. It is indeed the only method possible to competent executives with many important matters to occupy their attention. Doubts now said to exist in certain anxious minds in Washington have to do with the applicability of the method to public affairs, which move in an aura of politics.

But why should doubts exist? Is it necessary for the president of the United States to devote hours daily to interviews with job seekers, with proponents of budget items, or minor bills? Whatever the practice may have been, it is common sense and business sense to relegate all such matters to department heads and their assistants.

Some political stuffed shirts may think themselves slighted, but, once the policy is understood, the great majority of persons interested in legislation, administration and appointments will concede its eminent propriety. The president's time should be conserved for major problems and issues.—Chicago News.

BEATING THE GOVERNMENT.

If Arthur Sears Henning is correct in his interesting stories concerning smuggling and smugglers, we must, perhaps, begin to look about for a new definition of the word honesty.

Mr. Henning asserts that we are a nation of smugglers; that this practice is indulged in by representatives of the most exclusive and respected social classes in the land, that the articles smuggled into the country include liquor, gems—particularly gems—and practically all things else in the way of luxuries that the heart may desire.

Then there are the professional smugglers of all these things, and their number is legion. Add to the 800,000 American tourists who annually journey abroad the armies of professional smugglers and the purchasers of smuggled goods who may have knowledge of the illicit character of the trade, and just how many absolutely honest people have we in America?

Just what constitutes complete moral honesty, in the minds of many people—a mighty per cent. of the American people—appears to remain a matter of controversial debate.

According to customs officials, our folk get away with it, too. It is said that customs authorities estimate that only about five per cent. of the national smuggling ever is detected. They assert that people in "high" life commonly indulge in it, and that women are the worst offenders. So there you are!

Perhaps we need an Anti-Smuggling league, with a powerful lobby at Washington and with branches in every state and city in the union and an army of high-salaried leaders and well-paid subordinates.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

NOT AN INTERFERENCE, AN ATONEMENT.

The rapid character of the campaign that opponents of congressional reapportionment have been putting up in the senate was inadvertently and quite unintentionally exposed by the oratorical member from Mississippi, Senator Pat Harrison, when he rose and with a fine outflow of crocodile tears of tenderness for the rights of the house of representatives insisted that a reapportionment measure ought to originate in the house since it affects only the membership of that body.

Such a contention become rather ghastly upon simple recollection of the way in which the senate has undertaken to force the debenture scheme upon the house. And it grows absolutely farcical upon remembering that twice in recent years the house of representatives has sent a reapportionment measure to the senate only to have that body bury it, and that upon the second occasion—at the close of the last short term—Mr. Harrison himself took the floor in opposition, with the announcement, as Senator Vandenberg had reminded him, that he intended " to use every technicality and every dilatory tactic at hand under the rules" in order to prevent its consideration.

There are times when the senate shows a strong tendency to become offensively officious and attempts to invade the prerogatives of the body at the far end of the capitol building. But by passing the pending reapportionment measure it will simply be performing an act of atonement and reparation for an affront to that body.—Detroit Free Press.

Something of a Lack Still.

A French biologist claims to have invented a successful substitute for blood. Now if some one will just some along with a good substitute for brains, he will confer a real blessing.—Springfield, Missouri, Press.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, May 21.—This ugly story comes from one close to police headquarters and sheds a high light on the danger of casual flirtation in the wicked city. During a three weeks' period headquarters received unofficial whispers of seven mysterious black-jackings.

All seemed to have taken place along a certain strip of Park avenue and every supposed victim maintained stubborn silence. But the police kept on the trail of rumors and discovered that in each instance there was a "pick up" contact in foyer of an upper Fifth avenue hotel.

There followed a taxicab drive from the hotel to a certain address on Park avenue. Witnesses were found who had seen bludgeoned men staggering and bleeding along the street mumbling of robbery. But they waved questioners off and went on their way alone.

A handsome young detective was selected to loiter about the hotel lobby with an eye peeled for the flirtatious lady. One evening, after a long vigil, he was impressed by a beautiful girl with the proverbial baby stare he had seen several times about the reception-room.

She seemed agitated. He approached her, lifted his hat and said he had noted her distress and wondered if he could be of assistance. She was waiting, she explained naively, for an uncle to take her to a theater. Time passed and the uncle did not appear.

The detective asked if he could see her home. She coyly demurred, but finally consented and they drove off in a taxi. At a certain corner she said she lived a block away and it would be better to dismiss the cab and walk. Her family might be surprised if she returned with a stranger.

Near her doorway she suddenly stopped and said her shoe was unlaced. The detective gallantly knelt at her feet to fix things. His intuition caused him suddenly to glance up and a black jack was poised over his neck. The lady knew the proper spot for a knock-out. And that was her racket.

Cabaret girls are known in theatrical agencies as "floor troopers." Intimate contact with audiences in jazz parlors gives them a calloused poise that others acquire only with years. They can not resort to the generous use of cosmetics so close up.

It begins to appear that about all that remains for the Mexican rebel leaders is to wash up and seek admittance across the American border.—Lansing Journal.

A Good Business Principle.

Deforesting brings to attention the fact that "Woodman, Spare That Tree" was not only a sweet, old song but one conveying an important economic moral.—Washington Star.

Ye have wearied the Lord with your words. Yet ye say, "Wherein have we wearied him?" When ye say: "Every one that doeth evil is good in the sight of the Lord, and He delighteth in them; or, Where is the God of judgment?"—Malachi 2:17.

Prayer—"My God accept my heart this day, and make it always Thine."

Endless Energy.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

"Why is it that energy can only be transformed but never lost, destroyed or created by man? Are all the sources of energy traced back to the sun?—M. D., Chicago."

It was a saying of ancient philosophers that truth lies at the bottom of a well, but none hadn't any idea how deep was that well. And now science is finding out that the well is floored with false bottoms, each of which in turn conceals a still deeper deposit of mud, with only bubbles issuing to show that truth may be below somewhere. The bubbles are used to inflate theories which rise out of the mouth of the well like balloons, and one after another go floating off to burst and disappear in infinite space.

Such, up to date, is the Sisyphus-ge ipation of those who go seeking for absolute truth—the bottom facts of existence. There has never been any dictum not ultimately contradicted, and this is true of the doctrine of the "conservation of energy." Until man got his intellectual fingers inside the atom, it looked as though that doctrine were a bit of absolute truth, but now doubts are awakened. The interior of the atom begins to look to some speculators like a sanctuary wherein the "laws" that prevail outside have no executive force.

But we may keep away from the miasmic well wherein the digging after truth goes on, and wait to see if it shall be eventually cleared and purified. And meanwhile we can continue to accept the doctrine of the conservation of energy, and admire its many beautiful points. But then we must be content, as is the case with all the "old knowledge," with the admission that we can not know why things are as they are; but we may know how they are related, and the way they act upon and among one another.

We say that energy can not be lost simply because when it seems to be gone we are always able to trace it and find it again, if only we look long and carefully enough. And it reappears in so many wonderfully different forms that we can hardly blame ourselves for feeling a strong faith that it is to speak it—mortal and indestructible. It is Proteus himself; there is no end to its changeability, but its essential nature is never lost. It is always energy in some form; i. e. it is always doing or ready to do work of some kind.

In truth, we are not bound to account for the existence of energy any more than we are bound to account for the existence of matter, or for our own existence. The simple fact is that we can't. We exist, we are here. So energy exists, here and everywhere, and we can no more make energy, as our experience proves, than we can make life or matter out of nothing. The world and the universe are made up of at least these two realities—matter and energy. And apparently one can not exist without the other, for they are interchangeable. Matter has been called "frozen energy," and energy then might be called fluid matter.

Electricity is a form of energy, light is a form of energy, heat is a form of energy, motion is a form or expression of energy. The atom seems to be a storehouse of inconceivable energy. Swedenborg thought that energy was the original force of the creator poured through creation. That is too "mystical" for some who do not consider "space-time" to be at all mystical. Great is the power of the point of view.

Of course all the sources of energy are not to be traced to the sun. The sun supplies nearly all the energy we know of in the solar system, but the sun is a small star among billions of others, and the solar system is but a speck lighted by this small particular star of ours. The sources of energy are as wide as the universe—are indeed the universe itself—and its creative power.—Copyright, 1929, International Feature Service, Inc.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

A short time ago the memory expert was the envy of the world. He was believed to have a big start in life because he had made a walking encyclopedia and a city directory out of himself. There was a time, too, when the rapid calculator was in vogue. But the adding machines do his work, and do it accurately.

Now the emphasis is on the creative mind, the man who thinks up something different. Originality is the trademark of genius. If you can originate ideas you are in demand.

"We will never preserve our nation unless we begin to see our nation as merely a part of the whole world. We can not think in terms of a nation. We must think in terms of the entire world."

This is why Dr. Merton S. Price, forceful Detroit pastor, advocates the placing of globe maps in all homes. He believes they would instill in the minds of children the fact "that the world is round, not flat; that there is no up, or now down; that everything and every place is a part of the whole."

Now what do you think of that?

If you are a real estate man you probably know Harry H. Culver. He's meeting thousands of co-workers in the realty field in his aerial tour of the United States and Canada. As president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards he is making his office in a six-passenger cabin monoplane.

Culver has a good idea. He sees an urgent need for uniform legislation in the real estate field. Sectional viewpoints have been at odds. To overcome misunderstandings, he's making personal visits to local boards. Flies all over the country. Saves time by the air-route and gets personal contact with more realty men than he could get traveling any other way. It's an idea which other heads of national associations might adopt.

Dr. George R. Dodson, professor in Washington university, St. Louis, knows about nervous breakdowns. The breakdown follows an unconscious desire for it. He calls the collapse a way out for the person trying to escape the conflicts of life.

Professor Dodson sees happiness and love as the dikes protecting men and women against nervous collapse. If you're happy it doesn't make much difference how hard you work. Your nerves won't fret.

Dinner Stories.

"I hear there's an old man here that's 104 years old," said the visitor to the village. "You must indeed be proud of him."

"Proud nawthin'! All he's done is grow old, an' took him a long time to do it, too."

Aunty was entertaining her two nephews and thought to educate them by the way. Putting out two pieces of cake, one much larger than the other, she said:

"Now I want to see which of you has the better manners."

"Oh, Jimmy has," said Johnny, as he grabbed the big one.

PLEA FOR FARM AID IS MADE BY MOUSER

Tariff Discussed by Congressman in First Speech Before House

With a plea for a higher tariff on sugar to protect Ohio sugar beet growers Congressman Grant E Mouser from the eighth Ohio district recently made his first address before the house of representatives It appears in report of the Congressional Record received here today

Mouser s address was made during the debate in the house on the proposed revision of the tariff Hancock county one of the six counties in Mouser s district is one of the largest sugar beet growing counties in Ohio

In opening his address Mouser declared that the paramount duty of the house in its special session is to enact legislation for the benefit of the farmer

I am ready and willing to support tariff legislation which may be of benefit to him regardless of his location and all of us should assume the broad rather than the selfish viewpoint in this regard the congressman said

There are numerous organizations which pretend to represent the viewpoint of the American farmer but unfortunately for the farmers some of these organization through their alleged spokesmen do not agree on the solution of this great agricultural question How nice it would be and how enlightening to those of us who have only the desire to act wisely in their interest if a legislative program could be presented by spokesmen who were recognized as representing the viewpoint of the American farmer as a whole rather than purely sectional interests.

Mouser declared the National Grange to be more truly representative of the American farmer as a whole than any other organization

Mouser dwelt at length on the condition confronting Ohio sugar beet growers, citing specific cases from Hancock county

A COLOR arrangement of orchid and green, with large baskets of deep pink roses and tulips adding a note of color to the rooms, was used by Mrs. T. R. Evans and Miss Helen Sneckenberger in decorating the rooms of the Evans apartment, West Center st., for the annual indoor picnic of LeMercute club, closing its 1928-29 club season.

Seven small tables were arranged, centered with silver vases holding orchid sweet peas, and carrying out the color scheme in the appointments. Following the picnic supper, Mrs. A. Gibson and Mrs. Thomas Sutherland, delegates to the state convention of the Ohio Federation of Women's clubs in Dayton in April, gave interesting reports of the meeting.

Henry Clork, of Chicago, Community Fund campaign educational director, talked to the club on the meaning of a campaign fund and the position the Marion County Federation of Women's clubs holds in the budget.

Miss Marjory Eymon, president for 1928-29, presented the gavel to Miss Helen Jacoby, incoming president, who presided during the remainder of the meeting. Miss Eymon contributed a paper on the life of Eugene O'Neill as a dramatist, and discussed several of his representative plays. The life of Percy MacKaye and his work as a poet and dramatist, was the subject of a paper by Miss Elizabeth Conley. Oct. 7 the club will open its season for 1929-30.

No More Hemorrhoids

Pile Agony Ended Without Cutting.

Pile sufferers can only get quick, safe and lasting relief by removing the cause—bad blood circulation in the lower bowel. Cutting and salves can't do this—an internal remedy must be used. Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid, a harmless tablet, succeeds because it relieves this blood congestion and strengthens the affected parts. Hem-Roid has a wonderful record for quick, safe and lasting relief to Pile sufferers. It will do the same for you or money back. Henney & Cooper and druggists anywhere sell Hem-Roid with this guarantee.—Adv.

Another Great Mystery Story

FOLLOWING THE ADVENTURESOME "GRAY PHANTOM"

BY HERMAN LANDON

SEVENTEEN

He found a door, opened it, then stood listening, but no sound of life came from the interior. From his pocket he took a flashlight with which he had provided himself before he left the city. Entering, he swung the electric gleam over the floor and the walls. What he saw confirmed his earlier impression that the building had once served as a boathouse. Among other debris was a dilapidated boat bearing the name Tuckaway camp in scratched and faded letters across its bow. Apparently nothing of interest was to be found in such a place, but an indefinable curiosity urged him in. In a corner he saw a stairway, and in a moment he started to ascend. His electric torch revealed a door, and it yielded readily to his pressure.

Standing in the doorway, he ran his eyes over a commonplace sight. Evidently the little room had once been occupied by a servant of Tuckaway camp, for there was a bed, a table and two chairs, and a heating apparatus. The single window was boarded up, and the air was stuffy from lack of ventilation.

Vanardy was about to turn back, but a hazy impression make him cast another glance over the apartment. Despite appearances, he had an unaccountable feeling that it had not been vacant long, perhaps only a day or two. Something told him, too, that its former occupant had left it in a hurry. He tried to trace the impression to its source, but just then he heard the door below open and close. For a moment or two somebody fumbled about downstairs, and then he heard steps ascending the stairs.

Vanardy hesitated as to whether he should extinguish his flashlight, but the intruder had already reached the top of the stairs. He turned, and their eyes met. The newcomer's were hard and blue and held a light of cynical amusement. Vanardy had never seen him before, but he knew instantly who it was. Harry Bell's photograph had appeared several times in the newspapers in connection with accounts of the Craig murder.

"Hello," said Bell, looking him coolly over. "Couldn't you find something more interesting to do than prowling about an old dump like this? I'm Harry Bell. Maybe you've heard of me?"

Vanardy nodded, as yet uncertain how to construe Bell's intrusion. There was a good deal of insolence in the fellow's manner, but somehow he could not resent it.

"Dinner is ready," Bell announced. "Stanhope asked me to go out and look for you. I'd never have found you if you hadn't left a trail of footprints in the sand along the beach."

"I didn't know you were at Tuckaway camp," Vanardy remarked.

"Came only 20 minutes ago. Stanhope invited me to stay for dinner." He smiled impudently, at the same time leveling a sustained glance at Vanardy's shell-rimmed spectacles and gray-sprinkled beard. "Stanhope told me your name is Dawson. Funny I never heard of you, since we are in the same profession."

There was a faint sneer in his tone, but still Vanardy felt no resentment. He could see that Bell had keen eyes and was not lacking in imagination, and he wondered how long his assumed role would pass muster. For the present Bell evidently regarded him as one of the meddlesome but harmless cranks who flock in the wake of every sensational murder.

"Well, you see, I am only an amateur," he modestly explained. "The case has certain points of interest that attracted me. Are you here in a professional capacity, Bell?"

"Professional? Well, you might call it that. I am here to save the shreds of my reputation." He chuckled cynically. "Everybody says Harry Bell is crooked, and, between you and me, they aren't far from right. I've got neither conscience nor principles and wouldn't know what to do with them if I had, but murder—ugh! Don't like anybody to think that Harry Bell is a murderer."

"Does any one think so?"

"Don't you?"

Vanardy did not reply. The thought that Bell might know more of the murder than he had told had ocurred to him. Out of his shell-rimmed lenses he studied this extraordinary individual who, though admitting his lack of moral scruples, professed to have come to Tuckaway camp to clear his name of suspicion.

"Stumped you, eh?" said Bell sneeringly. "You're too polite to say what you think. I don't like polite people. I prefer plain words, even when they sting. Everybody who has had anything to do with this case is too polite. They have a sneaking suspicion that Harry Bell killed Craig, but they don't say so. You're like the rest of them."

"I think you are wrong, Bell. Everybody I have talked with seems convinced that the Gray Phantom committed the murder."

Bell thought for a moment. "Well, maybe he did. That is what I want to find out. If the Phantom did it, he turned the spookiest trick that was ever pulled off.

"The fact remains that, so far as appearances go, Harry Bell is the only man alive who had a chance to kill Craig. True, isn't it?"

"So it seems—but things aren't always what they seem. It may turn out that another person had an opportunity to commit the murder. In that event the case against you—if there is a case—would collapse."

Bell gave him a shrewd look. "Something tells me you're a whole lot deeper than you seem, Dawson." He chuckled dryly. "You hit the nail right on the head. If it can be shown that the job could have been done by somebody else, then Harry Bell is cleared. I've come here to show just that." He looked about him in the light of the electric torch. "Not looking for clues in this old dump, are you?"

Bell gave him another sustained glance, then nodded knowingly. "I was right; you're deeper than you look. Let's go to dinner. I'm starved."

Silently, they walked back to the house. Vanardy, remembering his impression that he had been followed on his way out, glanced sharply about him, but he could see no sign of espionage, and in the scowling blackness of the night the scenery had a weird and unreal appearance that dimmed his perceptions. They entered the dining room, where Stanhope was waiting for them, and a twinge of misgiving seized Vanardy as he saw that still another guest had arrived during his absence.

"It seems to be a field day for detectives," the lawyer remarked. "Mr. Dawson, let me introduce Lieutenant Culligore of the New York police department."

Vanardy extended his hand. With an inward quaver, but without a sign of nervousness, he looked for a moment into a pair of slowly twinkling, mouse-colored eyes—eyes that even the Gray Phantom had rarely been able to deceive.

Dinner passed off rather smoothly on the whole, save for an occasional sensation of uneasiness experienced by Vanardy when Lieutenant Culligore fired him with one of his slow, baffling glances or twisted his lips into one of those vacuous smiles that in the case of any other person but Culligore would have signified nothing but a sluggish intellect. When the little dinner party broke up, Vanardy had no reason to think that the lieutenant had penetrated his assumed guise, but there was food for somber reflection in the thought that Culligore had always possessed an uncanny knack at hiding his thoughts.

It was a motley little gathering, and beneath an exterior of light banter the air was charged with the kind of tension that is always noticeable in groups where there are cross-purposes and mutual suspicions. Stanhope, sleek, genial and well poised, did his best to supply an element of comic relief, but now and then a forced and unnatural note crept into his pleasantries. Culligore, the inexorable man-hunter, seemed to lay unnecessary emphasis on the fact that his visit was unofficial and that the capture of the Gray Phantom, granting that that accomplished villian had committed the murder, was a matter of personal pride with him. Harry Bell, saturnine and cynical, seemed to find a certain grim satisfaction in the belief that he was under suspicion. Vanardy played his part with great skill, but was unable to determine whether suspicion or condescension was uppermost in the attitude of his companions. Now and then he glanced covertly at William, who, silent and efficient, hovered at their backs, but the servant's face revealed no other concern than a desire to render competent service.

The visitors decided to spend the night at Tuckaway camp, and it was agreed that one of them should occupy the blue room, Stanhope pointing out that a night spent on the scene of the murder should offer exceptional opportunities for observation. The person who was to sleep in the chamber of mystery was chosen by lot, and the chance fell on Vanardy.

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Woman's Lasting Affections

BY ADELE GARRISON

Lillian Urges Madge to Keep Phil Veritzen in Line

LILLIAN'S words concerning my management of Philip Veritzen and his feeling for me were the height of absurdity—I knew that—but she managed to invest them with such an air and tone of sincerity that I found myself literally gasping with astonishment as I guided the car through the gate of the farmyard. Dicky was nowhere to be seen—he evidently had not yet returned and I thanked my particular little joss for the small mercy. I needed time to recover my breath from Lillian's astounding assertion that Philip Veritzen was "half off his head" about me, but I could keep him, "cherishing a hopeless heartbreak for an unattainable star." She had commented before upon my employer's admiration for me, but never had she spoken so plainly concerning it.

"Don't talk nonsense," I said crossly when I felt that I could speak.

Playing Ostrich

Lillian leaned forward and looked mischievously into my face.

"Well done, old dear!" she said. "That's the most approved mid-Victorian way of taking raillery concerning the admiration of what your great aunt would call 'one of the opposite sex.' You really do it very well. But it won't do. You've got brains, also too much sense to play ostrich. Old Phil Veritzen is daffier about you than he's been over any woman for many a day. He's revelling in the romance, too. 'I know the cork of his old eye,' to quote the revered Rudyard. He's probably got incense burning before your pictured face if he's been able to steal a photograph somewhere."

I was furious that I could not conceal the flaming dush which stained my face. But her words had evoked the memory of the annoying and surprising revelation which Noel Veritzen inadvertently had given me concerning his father's replacing his long-cherished picture of Queen Olga of Transylania—his first infatuation—with a photograph of me which he had made from a studio group.

"So-o-o!" Lillian drawled, and I marveled through my wrath at her persistence in commenting upon the topic which she must know was most annoying to me. Usually she is meticulous in her consideration of one's privacy. But she seemed determined to keep me on the rack, and though I hotly resented her apparent crassness, yet I knew subconsciously that there was some exceedingly good reason for it in her own mind.

"So-o-o," she drawled again, this time with laughter in her voice—"so the old boy's been stealing photographs like a love-sick freshman. I wonder who tipped you off, for I know you didn't sanction his having any kodak of you. Look here!" as I angrily jerked myself toward the door of the car, "you stay put for a second or two. I've got something to say to you before anybody finds out we're back and interrupts us."

She put a firmly detaining hand upon my arm and pulled me back beside her.

"I'll admit my alleged humor is an awful thing, and that I'm all wet generally," she said. "And I'll apologize all over the map for my involuntary chuckle at your left tale face when I spoke of photographs. But that doesn't alter the fact that you're the only person who can keep Phil Veritzen walking the straight and narrow during the next few weeks. He's likely to upset the apple cart at any minute with his ridiculous notions of the divinity which doth hedge royalty and all the rest of it. You agree with me that we want to get there sprigs of royalty safely back to their homes with all romantic American entanglement simply memories?"

It was an imperative question, and I answered it promptly, if sullkily.

"Of course."

"Then don't endanger the apple cart yourself, by refusing to take the reins whenever old Phil Veritzen backs into the shafts. For of all the balky old mules in the wide land, he is the worst. Just now you happen to have his number. He'll eat sugar from your hand and refrain from kicking the shafts from the wagon. So don't you dare to resign until this present job is over. I told you this before, plainly enough, I thought, but you're evidently forgotten the lesson. Police! Here comes the Dicky-bird, on two wheels as usual. Now for the fireworks! But remember I'm the best little asbestos curtain in ten counties."

Oppose one who is consentially stubborn and see how long you'll last.

Dancers! Avoid Perspiration Odor

Strong body odor is always present during exercise and excitement of dancing. You may not notice it but your partners do.

Don't risk giving offense. Use Kora Konia—the soothing deodorant. A remarkable new powder discovered by Monnen—producers of the finest shaving creams, talcums and baby powders. It neutralizes perspiration acids and prevents odor. Regular application keeps you free from odor all day and evening.

Kora Konia also absorbs excess perspiration; avoids unsightly moistures; thus preventing injury to garments. Soothes, heals raw, rubbed skin. Ends burning and itching.

Be free from perspiration odor all summer. Apply Kora Konia liberally and frequently. Heat deodorant, too, for sanitary pads. Apply to feet to keep perspiration acids from injuring hose. At all druggists.—Adv.

Myrna Loy Tells How To Have Lovely Skin

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—Thirty-nine movie directors say that a girl must have exquisite skin if she is to touch the heart. As Howard Brotherton, director for Warner Brothers, forcefully expresses it: "The most appealing charm of all is a lovely smooth skin. And the perfection we call 'studio skin' is the outstanding factor in screen success today."

Myrna Loy, Warner Brothers' beautiful star, finds Lux Toilet Soap splendid for the smooth skin a screen star must have. "This white, daintily fragrant soap leaves my skin so beautifully smooth!" she says.

Nine out of every ten screen stars are enthusiastic about Lux Toilet Soap. And all the great film studios, following their stars' example, have made it the official soap for dressing rooms.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

I LAID a long time this morning patting Jubilee on the head and telling him he was a brave dog and that I was proud of him for doing what he done to the snake last evening when it was striking at Annabelle Lee. She didn't know what it was and didn't know it was striking at her, and if it hadn't been blind from shedding its skin and just striking at the sound her feet made when they moved it might of hit her. A snake is the hardest thing to skin ereryone ever saw.

When I had put my britches on and let Jubilee down and got downstairs and done my chores and was bringing the milk in I saw the snake laying out in the yard where my father had stretched it to measure, and it was five feet long. My grandfather said it was poison but Jubilee had smashed its head up so bad that he couldn't be sure what kind it was. As soon as I got the milk skum I got a knife and went out and started to skin the snake, and a snake, even a dead one, wont lay still whilst it is being skun. When I had got it skun about half ways Bunty took hold of the skun part and told me to pull on the skin, and the skin came off like the stocking of a leg, then I slit it the rest of the way down and stretched it and tacked it on the side of the barn.

Now if my mother is ever mean to Jubilee when he gets old or wants me to trade him off or get rid of him I will point at the skin on the barn and I will say to her, "Maddum, remember who saved your child!" And I guess that will be something for her to put into her pipe and take a whiff of.

The Farrels and the Wagmores were over to see the snake skin, and Youniss and Maggie who got fascinated on her leg and Feeble looked at it a long time. Then Feeble asted who skun it, and I said I did, and she said "Have you washed your hands since?" and I said "Wouldn't you have washed your hands if you had been handling a dead snake?" That fooled her. Then I snuck into the barn and washed them in the barn pail and wiped them on my shirttail. She shouldn't think a fella can remember everything.

When school had let out we all went around to the vacant lot to play two-old-cat, and whilst we were there old man Scanlon came out and watched us play, and then we all went and sot on the fence outside of Miss Parmer's window and talked to her. And she said old man Scanlon is getting feeble and beginning to break, and it won't be very many months now. I was going to ast her what she meant but just then someone pushed me off the fence and skun out before I could get out from between the house and fence. So I forgot. I hope she don't mean he is going to die.

THERE is always a new novelty in ankle designs on sheer hose and this time it's a solid hand with a diamond motif in front woven into the stocking

It won't be long before Rosalie will be buying her hose in jars and tubes' There is a new cream which, when spread over bare legs, gives the effect of silk stockings Its a sunburn cream of course and after it has dried it is as smooth as ivory, covers over blemish and hair follicle and is not affected by ocean bathing or rubbing against furniture. Unless it is removed with soap and water it will stay on until it disappears by the process of erosion Takes about three minutes to apply and there are about ten applications to a tube, which is much cheaper than a pair of stockings'

Opportunity for Greater Service Will Be Given Y by Community Fund Plan

Expansion of Work for Men and Boys To Be Possible When Organization Is Freed of Financial Burdens and Worries

In six months' period, the Y M C A cut its payroll from $8,200 to $6 800, according to Earl N. Hale general secretary, who is doing much to help the Community Fund campaign to a successful finish In the past year the Y has been renovated, remodeled, and made livable, and it is this organization of healthy, clean living clean thinking men and boys who will receive a part of the fund bud get

At present the membership is approximately 608 and it is the aim of the secretary and those interested in the Y's progress, to see this membership doubled in the coming year In addition, the Y has touched in some way or other in the past 12 months, 501 non members

The Community Fund drive will relieve officials of the Y and all other organizations, from drives, campaigns, and collection work time that can be spent on constructive work for boys and young men, in the case of the Y

Governed Locally

The Y M C A is an organization independent of state or national head departments, and is governed by the board of directors, including F J Schoenlaub, president, Charles H Isely, vice president, Roy Waddell, recording secretary, C Z Zachmann, treasurer and M L McDaniel, financial secretary In two years, the present board of 22 members will be increased to 24 members

Unlike many other organizations, the Y M C A is Christian, but not sectarian It teaches the boys and men to respect the religious teachings of their parents and churches, but at all times to be, above everything else, Christians

One of the chief reasons for the phenomenal success of the Y this year, Mr Hale said recently, is the keen interest which all the men and boys are taking.

The present building is 30 years old and conceded by the members and secretary to be a "white elephant" Old buildings are expensive to run and the Y is a wonderful example of all that the planning of a Y shouldn't be This year, the building was revamped for service and attractiveness, and soon will be repainted

Lives Within Income

Last year was the first time in years that the Y has lived within its cash income The building does not give the income it should but with improvements, it would yield a next income in its own right

The Y would like to do more for the girls of the city but in its present home and with the present financial conditions this is impossible, although this spring a special course in swimming instructions is being offered the girls and women of the city

It is hoped that the Girl Reserves organized here this winter will build up into a Young Women's Christian association

The Y offers people of the city the opportunity of listing rooms for rental With its nine dormitories, there is inadequate space to care for all the calls that come for rooms, and the Y has added the service for people desiring to rent their vacant bedrooms

Has Dining Hall

By putting the restaurant on the second floor, the Y has its own dining room, with a cheerful, clean meeting place.

The Y tries to train boys for leadership in communities and it is through this effort that there are two leadership corps, one for young men, and one for boys. The corps are composed of picked men

Lessons at the Y last year taught 368 people in Marion to swim, and 12 passed the life saving test. Thirty people were aided in finding employment last year, through the efforts of the Y.

Among the Y organizations are the following two leaders corps three Girl Reserve units, Friendly Indians, for boys of 9 10 and 11 years of age, to study Indian lore; Y-Indus club, made up of boys a year or two out of high school, with Walter Moore as leader, Squareheads club led Bebble, leader Senior Hi Y club, Meridian club, dinner club meeting Thursdays for young business and professional men, L K McGinnis, president, and several other important Y groups.

'The Y should have more clubs, Mr. Hale believes

Complete Camp

The aim of Camp Robert Uhler, at Hepburn, to which 252 boys went last year, is to develop leadership and character Many improvements have been made in the camp, making it one of the most complete small camps in the state

Many people have since recognized that the Y M C A sponsors the recreational baseball season that so many Marion men and women, boys and girls, enjoy

More groups shall use the social rooms of the building for meeting places. The rooms are cheerful, clean and ideal for making the Y a civic center.

Last year 892 people participated in all the leagues of the Y Two hundred and fifty personal interviews were given.

The Marion association has sent four men to the Y college at Chicago this year, and several months ago conducted a Vocational Guidance campaign that helped 29 men to get in touch with business and professional men who could help them in choosing their life work.

With its share of the Community Fund budget, the Y M C A will operate efficiently this year and a half, clean up old debts and notes against the organization Its gets its share, the physical education department features will be improved.

SCIENCE CONQUERS moths!

[From Mellon Institute comes a great new moth-proofing discovery]

Financed by men interested in sure and lasting moth-protection for clothing and furnishings, the scientists of Mellon Institute of Industrial Research of the University of Pittsburgh set out six years ago to develop a moth-proofing method which would kill moths, prevent future damage by them, and do these things unfailingly!

Today the results of their efforts, a moth-proofing compound which does what has never been done before—gives complete, certain and continuous moth-protection—is released to the public through The Hoover Company, maker of Hoover Electric Cleaners, and pioneer in furthering the care of home furnishings.

ANNOUNCING

the 5-year moth-proofing compound

No more moth damage! This is within reach of every home-maker today. Sure destruction of all moths in carpets, upholstered furniture, hangings, clothing, furs and blankets—and complete protection against the danger of attack in the future. And this protection is attained, not by a constant warfare against moths, but by a single thorough treatment of the moth-vulnerable articles in the home!

Hoover Konate has been undergoing laboratory tests for the past five years—has been in widespread industrial use for the past three years. Articles protected by it at the beginning of these tests five years ago are still impervious to moths today.

How many years longer absolute moth-protection will continue, only time can tell. But there are many reasons for the belief that it will be permanent. First, Hoover Konate has a remarkable penetrating property—instead of adhering merely to the surface it spreads widely and deeply through the fabric, giving complete distribution of the moth-proofing ingredient to every fiber. Second, it clings tenaciously; does not rub off; is not removed by water, brushing, steaming or vacuum cleaning; nor affected by spilled food. Thus, it both destroys the moths already existent in the article and renders the material inedible by any moths which may be deposited on it in the future.

Actual photograph of piece of cloth exposed to moth larvae for six months. The left half, treated with Hoover Konate, was untouched. The right half, untreated, was devoured.

Hoover Konate is absolutely harmless—will not shrink or spot clothing, is invisible and inodorous. Get a supply now—give your possessions real lasting protection against moths.

CAPITAL O K GIVEN HOOVER COMMISSION

Belief Held That President Has Done Good Job on Difficult Assignment

Miss Ada Comstock, president of Radcliffe college.

Little time is to be lost in getting the commission to work.

The president decided today to assemble the members in Washington next Tuesday. The 10 men and one woman who are to probe the causes of American lawlessness and endeavor to find a remedy for it will meet with Mr. Hoover around the White House luncheon table, and hear from him just what he expects they are to accomplish.

It will be up to Mr. Hoover to define the scope of the inquiry, for none of the members has been given any preliminary charts. It is expected that the president will reiterate his expressed belief that the present high peak of law-breaking can not be attributed wholly to prohibition, although that phase of it holds popular interest more than any other.

The chairman, George W. Wickersham, attorney general under Taft, has never been classified as a wet or a dry. Recently in a speech he expressed the opinion that the Jones law would defeat its own ends by its very severity, but that's about as far as he has gone publicly in expressing an opinion about prohibition.

Newton D. Baker, secretary of war under Wilson, similarly has never been classified. He supported Smith in the last election and was quoted during the campaign as saying, "I have never been a prohibitionist." But he has never taken any public stand against it, otherwise.

Judge William S. Kenyon of the U. S. circuit court of appeals, probably can be regarded as the driest member of the commission, as a senator from Iowa before the adoption of the eighteenth amendment, he was always prominent in pushing dry legislation. He was co-author of the Webb-Kenyon bill, making shipment of liquor into dry territory a federal crime.

Dean Roscoe Pound of Harvard Law school, is rated a judicially-minded liberal, with no positive commitments on the prohibition question so far as Washington knows. The same is true of Monte M. Lemann of Tulane university.

Col. Henry W. Anderson, Republican leader of Democratic Virginia, is rated dry, at least politically.

Frank J. Loesch, vice president of the Chicago crime commission, was appointed because of his intimate knowledge of racketeering and crime in Chicago, and the laxity there of criminal prosecution.

The others are federal district judges, William I. Grubb of Alabama, Kenneth R. McIntosh of Washington, and Paul J. McCormick of California.

CHILD CLINICS LIST NUMEROUS DEFECTS

Importance of Health Examinations Shown in Marion County

assistant nurses from the State Department of Child Hygiene, were in Marion today assisting Welker and the local nurses in the clinics at Vernon Heights school. This additional help will enable Dr. Welker to complete the clinics here at an earlier date than originally planned.

Following is the revised list of clinics for the remainder of this week and Monday: Wednesday, North Main Street and State Street schools; Thursday, Oak Street and Lincoln schools; Friday, Oakland Heights school; Monday, Silver Street and Davids Street schools. The former schedule would have terminated the work next Wednesday.

Clinics have been conducted at the following schools ending with Vernon Heights school today: Forest Lawn, Mark Street, Olney Avenue, Greenwood and Glenwood.

At the clinics, children eligible to enter school next fall are given thorough examinations. Charts are made of the defects of the child, and recommendations are made to parents and the family physician. The clinics this year have been quite popular, the average being around 20 children at each school.

"NEVER AGAIN," BOY RUNAWAY ASSERTS

Earl Zimmer, 13, Back Home After Trip Takes Him to Tennessee

Earl Zimmer, 13, told his mother last night he was not going to leave home again. Earl left Marion Saturday afternoon and had a "great time" traveling until he ran short of funds. Pecuniary difficulties were soon joined by homesickness, and the boy gave himself up to Cincinnati officials, Sunday night. He is now at his home, 1195 East Church st.

He left here at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon on the interurban. He stopped in Columbus hoping to see the airplane demonstrations there, but travelled on to Cincinnati when he was told maneuvers "were over."

It was in Cincinnati that the first of his financial troubles began. He deserted the interurban for a less expensive freight train which carried him into Tennessee. Here he became homesick and "broke" and caught another freight back to Cincinnati, where he voluntarily spent the night in the city prison, and wired his mother for funds to return home.

Earl said he had satisfied two of his greatest desires: to see the Kentucky mountains, and travel out of Ohio. He was disappointed in not seeing the airplane maneuvers in Columbus.

He will be on his paper route tonight, making up the expenses of his "fling" which cost him about $16.

TO ATTEND CONVENTION

C. E. Merkel, president of the Marion Savings Bank Co., will attend the state bankers' convention at Columbus, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. Mr. Merkel will probably be the only Marion banker at the convention, unless others attend sessions later in the week.

Among the startling charges made by Norris which he supported either by records of the federal trade commission's inquiry or by other records were that

The power trust tried to buy the Cleveland Plain Dealer and the Boston Post, offering $20 000 000 for each.

A $40 000 000 fund was set aside for the purchase of other newspapers and that 11 papers were bought out right while loans were made to two more.

Some of these bought newspapers hid the power trust interest when making ownership returns to the post office department

An employe of the Chicago Journal perjured himself by claiming to own the interest in the paper which actually was held by the power trust

GROUND MANEUVERS START ALONG CREEK

Planes Attempt To Locate Phantom Armies Near Columbus

By International News Service

Two phantom armies each composed of 400 000 troops moved into position along Big Darby creek 15 miles west of Columbus early today and at noon the second phase of the 11 day mock war was started

The huge make believe forces were augmented by about 1 600 soldiers which provide the 'back bone' of the armies

Heavy artillery was drawn up to the scene and at noon when the first shot was fired the Reds and Blues were at it again It did no damage as it was a simulated discharge of the gun on a simulated no man's land

Meanwhile small pursuit planes of the Reds and Blues zipped through the skies seeking the location of enemy encampments and occasionally varying the monotony of scouting with a dog fight

The air forces each consisting of about 100 airplanes were being used in a secondary capacity as the second phase of the war was being fought

The ground maneuvers will continue until Sunday

INSURGENTS FEAR SKY-ROCKET RATES

Senator Brookhart Says Government Ownership Will Be Next Move

WASHINGTON May 21—The supreme court's decision in the O'Fallon railroad valuation case may be followed by a congressional fight for repeal of the Esch Cummins act under which the interstate commerce commission was directed to fix rates to yield all railroads a fair return on their valuation

While the effect of the decision in the so-called fifteen billion dollar law suit still was being debated by lawyers today congressional insurgents voiced their alarm lest the decision should ultimately send railroad rates sky rocketing to a new high level

Senator Brookhart, Republican of Iowa a member of the insurgent bloc declared that demands for government ownership of railroads will follow a pushing up of railroad valuations under the decision

Hailed as Rail Victory

While the big court failed to lay down a rule of thumb method for valuing the nation's railroads—the commission's valuation of the O'Fallon railroad being overturned because it gave no weight to reproduction new cost—the decision was hailed in railroad circles as a tremendous victory

The commission must now revise its valuation methods and the only way it can do so in considering reproduction costs is to revise them upward it was declared This view was expressed by Justice Stone in his opinion dissenting from the majority of the court

The railroads' great victory was in the firm declaration of the court that the commission must consider the cost of reproduction, and the cost now is far greater than when the railroads originally were built, it was pointed out.

Pushes Up Valuation

The aspect of the decision which has aroused the fears of congressional progressives is the statement of the interstate commerce commission, pointed out by Justice Stone that valuation on a reproduction new basis in 1919 would have pushed the total value of all railroads from $19,000 000 000 to $40 000 000 000

If the commission fixed rates on the higher valuation to yield 5 1 2 to 5 3-4 per cent the public would pay two billion dollars more in freight rates annually The public could not bear rates to give a fair return on this valuation Justice Stone said

BRITISH SUBS NOW CARRYING AIRPLANES

Big Turret for Gun Utilized for Carrier It Is Revealed

LONDON May 21—For some time past British submarines have been carrying fighting airplanes it was learned by International News Service today

Details concerning the unification of these two most formidable weapons of war are naturally being kept secret

By an ingenious arrangement the big turret that hitherto has been used for accommodation of a powerful gun is converted into an airplane carrier It has been perfected to such an extent that the plane can be shot off within a few minutes after the sub marine reaches the surface The machine used is of British make and is known as the Parnall Peto It is equipped for both observation and fighting purposes

An Italian designer first perfected the device for making this combination of undersea and aircraft possible Then France jumped at the idea Now Great Britain has followed suit

Thus while their delegates are apparently striving for disarmament at various Geneva conferences three of the great European naval powers have combined these two deadly weapons of war into a single fighting power

Cubs, A's To Win

Walsh Picks Winners of Major League Pennant Races After Month of Play; Cards To Chase Bruins and Yanks, Mackmen

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, May 21—Slam the one-two-three cubs off the major league bottle this morning mix thoroughly with one part intuition and two parts common sense, leave in a cool dry place and let it stand for four months. It can afford to stand for four months As a matter of fact, it probably will The major league races will not end until October but, either by chance or design, the order of the three money places just about has been achieved today

One month of baseball in the National league has all but convinced die hard New York that the fight lies between the Cubs and the Cards nah, with the Pirates an alternate choice The latter are good but better ball clubs than Pittsburgh have lost pennants and thought nothing of it The Giants might even get up in time to break into the first three but they are no pennant winner, a fact which even John J McGraw is beginning to suspect It looks as though they left their fight in the gymnasium

THE Philadelphia Athletics the New York Yankees and the St. Louis Browns are running the pace in the American league in that order today It might very well be the order of the finish in October Some club is going to beat the Yankees out of their fourth straight pennant and Philadelphia looks the part at this juncture

The Athletics taking matters pretty much in stride have hung on like a bad cold through two Yankee winning streaks and now are riding the pace, two games in front It was inability to stay with the Yankees early speed that lost the Athletics the pennant in 1927 and 1928 They aren't staying now they're running ahead Some aver that their hitting won't last through August and September but those are a couple of bridges that can be crossed in the order of their appearance

THE Browns aren't a hot choice now after losing successive series to the Athletics and Yankees in the west This, of course is more or less snap judgment snap without the letter 'n' The Browns are only 2½ games out of the lead and a young club like that is liable to come when the sun baked fields of August and September begin to bear down on elderly legs.

There is one pennant possibility not yet mentioned, the Detroit Tigers They are a hot up all through the middle west, where some even go so far as to say that they will win the pennant. And in truth they have the best pitcher in the league in Uhle and enough hitting for two ball clubs But no outfit ever won a pennant without a major league shortstop and it is my hunch that Detroit is not due to upset precedent now This curve however will go a lot of places and do a lot of interesting things before they pay the winners off in the fall

THE Cubs naturally are the best bet in the National league and not altogether because of their hitting and pitching The most significant development in connection with the Chicago club is that it left home out of the lead and came back in first place No Cub team since Joe McCarthy took the situation over has made Chicago a chronic contender but been able to win on the road prior to the first eastern trip of 1929 It is my guess that, when the time comes the Cubs will proceed to show that they are the class of the National league

The Cards are the entry they have to lick with the Pirates and Giants almost equally dangerous The latter will have to come from 7½ games back of the pace but everyone knows that they don't belong where they are, even without a second baseman They probably will do what every decent club has done in recent years come with a rush but come too late

TILLIE THE TOILER — NO INTERFERENCE — BY RUSS WESTOVER

IS MY BROTHER NIFTY IN?
NO, HE ISN'T. THE BOSS SENT HIM OUT ON AN ERRAND
DAD AND MOTHER HAVE BEEN WORRIED SINCE NIFTY STARTED WORKING HERE. THE KID HASN'T BEEN HIMSELF. HE DON'T TALK AND HARDLY EATS. THE ONLY THING HE'S CRAZY ABOUT IS HIS JOB
WE ALL LIKE HIM HERE IN THE OFFICE
IF HE'S BEEN ACTING QUEER AT HOME, I REALLY COULDN'T SAY WHAT CAUSES IT
I THINK I KNOW! GOOD DAY!
YOUR GOOD LOOKING BROTHER, WALTER WAS HERE, NIFTY
DAWGONIT! HE'S GOTTA KEEP OUTA MY AFFAIRS EVEN IF HE IS MY BROTHER

AND SOMETIMES IN THE TWILIGHT GLOOM APART— THE TALL TREES WHISPER— WHISPER HEART TO HEART— FROM MY FOND LIPS THE EAGER ANSWERS FALL— THINKING I HEAR THEE— THINKING I HEAR THEE CALL—

TOOTS AND CASPER — WHEN SEEING AIN'T BELIEVING — BY JIMMY MURPHY

LAST SUNDAY UNCLE EVERETT AND ELSIE WERE MARRIED, AND IMMEDIATELY SAILED FOR AN EXTENDED HONEYMOON IN EUROPE! THEIRS WAS THE SWEETEST ROMANCE EVER KNOWN • SWEETHEARTS IN THEIR YOUTH • PARTED FOR 31 YEARS • NOW BLISSFULLY HAPPY AT LAST
I CAN JUST PICTURE THE TWO TURTLE-DOVES SUNNING THEMSELVES ON THE DECK! HAND IN HAND, AND WHISPERING SWEET NOTHINGS IN EACH OTHERS EARS!
IT CERTAINLY IS A RELIEF TO SEE UNCLE EVERETT SMILING AND HAPPY, TOOTS! HE USED TO APPEAR SO SAD IT GAVE ME THE BLUES TO LOOK AT HIM!
AS THE HONEYMOONERS SPEED ACROSS THE BLUE ATLANTIC ABOARD THE GIANT LINER THEIR COUNTLESS FRIENDS THE WORLD OVER WISH THEM MUCH HAPPINESS AND GOOD LUCK!
